Scrap bin on a roll

Here's a low-rolling wood scrap bin that'll capture all the cutoffs while you work on your next project. Bolt swivel casters to the base of a storage bin ($6 at discount stores) and it'll scoot right where you need it. Sure, you can take extra time to beef up the casters-to-bin connection by bolting plywood on before attaching the casters, but it's easier to bolt them right through the thicker, reinforced area of the bin's bottom. Thanks to Zachary Lesko for this handy idea!

Bandsaw blade hangers

If you've ever suffered the indignity—and possible danger to eyes and face—of a bandsaw blade uncoiling as you've pulled it off the peg you hung it on, you'll love this tip from reader David Shapiro. Nest the coiled blades into binder clips and store them on your pegboard, and they'll never spring out at you again. Apply labels to the clip so you can simplify size selection and storage.
